

Experience Brand Gravity™

Bonding Brand & Customer.

What is Brand Gravity —and Why Should I Care?

The Secret Sauce to Brand Love & Ways to Make it Stronger

Let's talk about brand love.

Not the fleeting “thumbs up” kind, but the deep, unshakable bond that keeps customers coming back for more.

That's what we call Brand Gravity—the lasting bond between your brand & core customer.

When TIME & Statista dropped their “World's Best Brands of 2024” list,¹ it drove home this truth: In today's marketplace, a strong brand is your most valuable asset.

It impacts everything from the customer journey to your sales funnel, and:

- Influences customer preference
- Generates demand
- Sets you apart from the competition
- Protects against disruption
- Cultivates unstoppable advocacy & customer lifetime value

Yet, igniting brand love is no small task.

And though today's marketers have many channels within their mix to reach & engage their customers—from TV & print; to social media & email; to OOH & PR; and beyond—we fundamentally believe experiential is the most powerful channel to increase your Brand Gravity.

There's a reason event & experience investments grew by 23% in last year's Q1—the fastest growth in the Bellwether Report's 11-year history².

Each of your events & experiences can spark emotions so powerful, and resonate so deeply, they bond your core customer to your brand for life.

let's get into it!

The Power of Brand Gravity

TIME's top brands list also raised a big question:
What truly sets the best apart?

Sure, awareness, buzz & usage are important, but the heavy hitters scored big on two key metrics:

likeability
& loyalty

Combined, these made up 60% of the rankings³.

Why? Because when you like something, and especially when you love something, you keep coming back to it.

As TIME put it:
"[Brands are] ultimately defined—for better or worse—by consumer perceptions. They also play starring roles in our preferences and spending behavior as companies respond to, and shape, market trends."

And as we all know, consumers are fussy!

So, while those perceptions define your brand in the marketplace, your brand-building efforts have the ability to shape those perceptions—and can ultimately deliver preference & loyalty.

It's why 76% of marketers prioritize nurturing lasting customer relationships⁴.
And it's where Brand Gravity comes in—as the customer bond that, when cultivated, flourishes into advocacy & greater customer lifetime value.

In short:

brand love =
brand gravity

To picture it visually: BRAND GRAVITY is the tether to your brand, keeping customers from drifting toward competitors in today's expansive marketplace.

And this brings invaluable bottom-line business impact:

23% higher revenue for brands that prioritize customer engagement⁵.

A profit increase of 25% to 95%, from a 5% customer retention boost⁶.

Greater spend from

57%

of customers who identify as brand loyal⁷.

THE CHALLENGE:

While building customer preference is the most critical pathway to longstanding CLV, transforming "like" into brand love is arguably the most difficult.

THE SOLUTION:

enter experiential.

Experiential's Power to Strengthen Customer Bonds

Those fussy customer preferences are directly impacted by their experience with your brand, product or service.

Why? Think about it: We've all been that fussy customer.

We've all had experiences we've RAVED ABOUT:

Walking into a coffee shop on a damp, grey morning & being wrapped in the rich aroma of freshly roasted beans (& a friendly barista's smile!).

Arriving at your hotel travel-weary, only to be met with a cold drink & a perfectly turned-down bed waiting for you.

Bracing for customer service hell—only to be taken off hold & have your issue solved instantly & effortlessly.

And we've all had experiences that have TURNED US OFF forever:

Being ignored in a store while sales associates scroll TikTok behind the counter.

Barely making your connection through a chaotic airport only to be booted from your window seat at boarding.

Walking into an overcrowded conference, feeling lost, overwhelmed—and desperate for an escape route.

Each of these experiences—good or bad—leave a lasting emotional imprint.

And that's why each of your experiences can shape customer perception & preference—forging the bonds that lead to ultimate brand loyalty.

In other words:

Each event and experience can—and we believe should—increase your BRAND GRAVITY.

Here are four reasons why experiential is uniquely positioned to make it happen:

01

IT'S IMMERSIVE & MULTI-SENSORY.

Other marketing channels hint at your brand's story, but experiential puts your audience in the center of it—engaging their senses to create unforgettable interactions.

It makes sense that everyone is embracing the maximalism life: People want to feel & enjoy. They want experiences that move them:

- 83% seek experiences bringing joy & happiness.
- Yet, 70% can't remember the last time a brand excited them⁸.

And it's not just about delighting—it drives results:

- Multi-sensory marketing boosts emotional connection by 60% & purchase intent by 20%⁹.

Why? Because tapping into the senses is a shortcut to emotions & memories. "Smemory" isn't just a buzzword—it's a superpower that can make your brand unforgettable⁹.

And being unforgettable matters more now than ever.

Social media's passive scrolling & seamless user experiences that let audiences zone out have made everything blur together. Sairah Ashman, Global CEO of Wolff Olins, calls it "the flattening of everything," where brands & their spaces are becoming indistinguishable in the race to optimize UX¹⁰.

Why do 75% of consumers say they feel more connected to a brand after a brand experience¹¹?

Call it creative hyperbole: Immersive, multi-sensory experiential breaks through the monotony. It floods audiences with the feelings they crave—setting your brand apart from the competition and forging deeper bonds.

IT USES PARTICIPATION TO SHOW, NOT TELL.

“Personalization” is being touted as this year’s buzzword in trends reports, but let’s be real—it’s hardly new¹². And what does it mean, anyway?

Name dropping might feel nice but doesn’t dig into customer preferences. Generic retargeting ads & demographic targeting miss customer behavior nuances.

The truth? Most “personalized” efforts still miss the mark:

- 64% of consumers want to buy from companies that personalize experiences to their wants & needs¹³.
- Yet, 33% say brand messages don’t address those needs¹⁴.

Experiential flips the script by creating the ultimate personalized journey through participation.

By tapping into attraction motivators & behavior data, experience design puts your audience in the driver’s seat—fueling creativity with strategic insights to create a bespoke, interactive experience that deeply resonates.

Instead of messages that consumers tune out or forgettable sales pitches, experiential invites audiences to participate—testing & understanding the value in real-time.

This hands-on approach is why Bath & Body Works claimed the top spot in Male Cosmetics with its Men’s Shop pop-up tour at sporting events¹⁵.

And it’s why Pinterest’s Pinvision reimagined B2B conferences—immersing stakeholders in its business benefits, instead of just talking about it. Laura Gaffney, Pinterest’s Director of Business Marketing, EMEA & APAC, called it the perfect opportunity to “unboring” a traditional format¹⁶.

The result? Audiences don’t just “get it”—they feel it.

they remember.
they act.

And as a result, your brand moves from noise to necessity.

03

IT BUILDS TRUST TO BRIDGE THE "BELIEF GAP."

In a world where AI churns out deepfakes, clickbait & algorithm-driven content, trust has become the new currency.

It's what we call the Belief Gap—and as more brands turn to AI to produce content & campaigns, skepticism grows.

The result? Consumers demand proof—they need to see it—and experience it—to believe it:

- 56% worry about identifying what's real vs. fake¹⁷.
- 68% say AI advances make brand trust more important than ever.
- 71% want a human to validate AI outputs¹⁸.

This skepticism creates a critical opportunity: Live experiential can be your customer's ultimate truth detector.

That's because live, face-to-face interactions let audiences validate your brand in ways no algorithm ever could:

- 77% trust brands more after in-person experiences¹⁹.
- 85% are more likely to buy after participating in events & experiences²⁰.

But bridging the Belief Gap isn't just about data—it's about taste.

And honestly, this one had us talking. Marketers are buzzing about taste right now, but what does that really mean?

After some back & forth around the virtual watercooler, here's where we landed:

AI can churn out insights, analyze data & predict trends—but left unchecked, it's just amplifying what already exists. Ultimately, AI surfaces what gets clicks, not necessarily what's correct, resonant or impactful.

And that's the difference between being data-driven vs. data-informed:

Being DATA-DRIVEN lets the data & tech make the decisions for you.

Being DATA-INFORMED uses data as a guide—checking it against intuition, expertise, brand goals & audience needs to craft experiences that bring results.

As Elizabeth Goodspeed said, "AI itself can't generate good taste for you²¹." She's right—taste is inherently human. (And as we all know, bad taste is inherently common!)

Taste is the ability to sift through endless possibilities, recognize what matters, and turn raw insights into audience-centered experiences that resonate.

In experience design, taste is what transforms data into creative that feels authentic—delivering experiences that are trusted, real & emotionally sticky.

It's what breaks through the noise, moving beyond the expected to win over skeptics & build bonds that AI simply can't replicate.

“AI itself can't generate good taste for you.”
Elizabeth Goodspeed

04

IT'S YOUR HOLISTIC OMNICHANNEL AMPLIFIER.

We touched on all the marketing channels you have at your disposal—TV, print, social, email, OOH, PR & beyond. But the brands that break through don't just show up everywhere. They make every channel work harder.

And that's where experiential shifts the game.

It's not just another touchpoint—it's the force that unifies & amplifies the touchpoints across your marketing ecosystem, making your channels work harder for you in beautiful synchronization & harmony.

It's no surprise, then, that experiential is seeing exponential growth:

- 74% of Fortune 1000 marketers are increasing their experiential spend in 2025.
- 66% say experiential's importance to their company is growing.
- 50% report rising event ROI²².

As Emma Kirk, General Manager at the Institute of Promotional Marketing, put it: "Experiential marketing has earned its place at the centre of brand strategies²³."

Why? Because experiential turns customer data into seamless, high-impact engagement across every channel, fueling brand stickiness & maximizing ROI.

Just ask Kellanova. At the Pop-Tarts Bowl, they didn't just sponsor a game—they owned an award-winning experience.

From a fan-fueled pre-game tailgate to a giant edible mascot devoured by the winning team, the viral activation:

- Captured 80% of game-related coverage.
- Generated 15x more brand mentions vs. other non-sponsored bowl games.
- Delivered $1M in first-party data²⁴.

Experiential marketing has earned its place at the centre of brand strategies.

Emma Kirk

And that's the real power of experiential: it doesn't just fit into your marketing mix—it SUPERCHARGES it.

Ready to Increase Your Brand Gravity?

Every event & experience can do more than engage—they should bond your brand & customer for the long-haul.

And in a world overflowing with content, where customer attention is more fragmented than ever, experiential marketing stands out—as the most powerful, immediate channel to amplify your Brand Gravity.

It cuts through the noise.

It helps your customers believe your brand—and believe in your brand.

And it creates feelings so strong, they keep coming back for more.

Our proprietary Experiential Intelligence—what we call our science of attraction—proves this: When you uncover what truly delights & motivates your customers, and use strategic insights to power fact-based creativity, you can design experiences that drive deeper connections & real impact.

And that's when the magic happens.

The brand love you're craving?
That's Brand Gravity, baby.

And we can help increase yours.

let's make it happen
